

The Florida Department of Transportation (DOT) is responsible for the state highway systems and public transportation systems including air transit. Contracting for highly specialized services and purchasing common products are top priorities in the agency. The Department purchases road materials, construction materials, and any products or services related to highway road and bridge construction. The agency also purchases numerous supplies and services that help the agency run efficiently in its day-to-day operations.

The DOT is a decentralized agency consisting of the Central Office, seven Districts, and Turnpike Enterprise. Each District has offices responsible for acquiring commodities, contractual services, road and bridge construction and maintenance, and professional services. Determining which category your business falls under will be crucial to your success in doing business with DOT.

The purpose of public procurement is to promote efficiency, economy, and fair and open competition. The DOT does this by providing uniform rules and procedures that affect purchasing. Documentation and effective monitoring are also important means of establishing public confidence in the process by which commodities and contractual services are procured. We appreciate your interest in doing business with DOT.
